NEWS FOR SEPTEMBER

International Speakers Series, Christchurch, New Zealand

Following the two major earthquakes that have devastated the city of Christchurch in the last year and the subsequent aftershocks, plans are now under way to rebuild the city. The council's grand plan is to formulate a blue print for the city's future architecture and urban redevelopment that will create a strong, modern and vibrant Christchurch while still maintaining its cultural and historical heritage. The draft Central City Plan culminated in an International Speaker Series earlier this month. A mix of key personnel from around the globe were invited to speak, including Sir Richard Leese, responsible for overseeing the regeneration of Manchester city centre following the IRA bombing, Douglas Ahlers, the director of the Broadmoor project for recovery of New Orleans, and EA's director, Sam Martin. As a landscape architect and former Christchurch resident Sam is very keen to support the city's long term vision of creating a green and sustainable city in a garden. Working with fellow landscape architects (and partners in the Battersea Power Station project) LDA Design, and also Glowfrog visualisation studio, ideas and images were formulated for the final presentation. Click on the links below to view the presentation and subsequent local media coverage.
